How to Use this Publication

Understanding the industries that comprise a local economy can be helpful in knowing the types of jobs in the most demand. This publication provides an overview of the mix of industries in each Career and Technical Education Region (CTE), as well as how that mix differs from the state.

In this publication, you'll find two charts for each CTE showing 1) the distribution of jobs, and 2) the concentration of jobs. Distribution of jobs, illustrated by a pie chart, shows the percentage of jobs in each industry and the total number jobs located in the CTE. Note the mix of industries and those that dominate the area. For example, in the sample chart the regional economy is dominated by three industries, Education & Health, Manufacturing, and Retail Trade.

Concentration of jobs, a bar graph, compares the local mix of jobs to the state average. Industries that differ from the state are highlighted by a much lower or higher value. A value of 1.0 indicates an industry's concentration matches the state, less than 1.0 indicates its less concentrated, and greater than 1.0, more concentrated. Values too large to fit on the graph are noted with an angled tip and the actual value. In the case of the sample chart, four industries stand out, two are far less concentrated and two are more, of which Agriculture & forestry's value of 3.8 is off the chart. The concentration of jobs compared to the state points out the economic uniqueness of a region.

Using both charts together provide a more complete picture of the area. The industry with the highest concentration, Agriculture & forestry, is relatively small in the number of jobs (4.5% of 13,785 or 616 jobs). On the other hand, the largest sector, Education & Health, accounting for over a third of all jobs in the region, is only slightly more concentrated in the region than the State. Examining both the size of an industry and its concentration gives you a sense of the importance of an industry and its contribution to the uniqueness of a region.

More information about the data, industry descriptions and CTE region definitions can be found in the appendices.
